U of S unveils action plan to save $25M

Provost's committee proposal. Cuts to top administrative jobs planned as part of restructuring

A plan to save about $25 million at the University of Saskatchewan calls for reducing the number of deans by three and wrapping up some programs.

The newly released plan by the provost's committee says the first phase of restructuring will cut top levels of leadership by about 23 per cent.

There are proposals to dissolve the Centre for Continuing and Distance Education, as well as the Education and Media Access and Production unit by the end of the year.

The plan also warns that almost every level of the university and virtually every employee will be affected by a new organizational design for administrative and support services.

The provost's committee says due to the magnitude of the changes being contemplated, the journey will be "arduous."

The action plan is part of a bigger response by the University of Saskatchewan to address a projected $44.5-million deficit in its operating budget by 2016.

"Our goal initially was 20- to 25-million dollars, with $5 million reinvestment in our priorities, but we've estimated here about $25.3 million and there would be the subsequent reinvestment in 2015-16 of $5 million," said Greg Fowler, vice-president of finance and resources.

Fowler said they would be reducing the number of administrative positions.

"Positions such as the president, there's four vice-presidents and the ones that report to the vice-president, those include some directors, associate vice-presidents, vice-provosts, and deans and executive directors of schools, and so we're planning to reduce those positions somewhere between 10 to 12."

Embattled minister Draude won't seek 2016 reelection

Saskatchewan party co-founder. Leaving office she has held since 1995

One of the eight original founding members of the Saskatchewan Party plans to call it quits after five terms in office.

Social Services Minister June Draude says she will not run again in the next provincial election expected in April 2016.

"After the last election, I had a discussion with my family. I knew that the last election was the last time I was going to run," Draude said Wednesday at the legislature in Regina.

"It's just a time to do something different in my life."

She has five children and eight grandchildren.

Draude was first elected in the constituency of Kelvington-Wadena as a Liberal in 1995, but two years later she joined with three other Liberals and four Progressive Conservatives to form the Saskatchewan Party.

She has also been minister responsible for Crown Investments Corporation, and First Nations and Metis Affairs minister since the party took power in 2007.

Draude says a recent dispute over her ministerial travel expenses had nothing to do with her decision to retire.

The minister was under fire in the legislature earlier this month for using a car service in London that cost $3,600 over four days and for $200 spent on lunch with a friend. Those expenses were filed by the cabinet secretary and the clerk of executive council, who was on the trip with Draude last June.

Draude said she wasn't aware of the costs. The cabinet secretary has since repaid the expenses.

"I'm saddened by the fact that that was something that people will think about, but really what I'm happy about is that I had a chance to be part of not only starting a party, but building it and becoming government," she said.

Earlier this week, deputy premier and Finance Minister Ken Krawetz — another founding member of the Saskatchewan Party — said he won't run again. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Controversial art removed

A controversial piece of art has been removed from public display in Saskatoon.

The art installation resembling two cellophane-wrapped bales of recycling was removed Wednesday from the corner of 33rd Street and Avenue C.

Critics of the piece referred to it as a piece of garbage and an eyesore.

Artist Keeley Hafner says she's OK with her work, called Found Compressions One and Two, being removed.

She says it realized its full potential "in terms of generating dialogue."

The city has also removed a fiberglass sculpture of eight life-sized wolves called INFRA from its location at a downtown skating rink.

INFRA, by Toronto artist Tonya Hart, was originally installed November 2013.

Both installations were placed within the city as part of the Placemaker Program, which aims to promote contemporary arts in public spaces by leasing artworks from artists. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Trade challenge

Sask. wins dairy battle with Que.

Saskatchewan has won a trade challenge against Quebec over the sale of certain margarines, coffee whiteners and dessert toppings in the Quebec market.

A dispute resolution panel under the pan-Canadian Agreement on Internal Trade says Quebec's restrictions on the production, sale and marketing of vegetable-oil-based dairy products go against some rules.

Saskatchewan had argued in January that the restrictions were illegal under rules that prohibit governments from creating barriers to interprovincial trade. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Nanaimo, B.C. Former employee arrested in sawmill shooting spree

Two employees at a Vancouver Island sawmill were killed, two others were injured and one of their former co-workers was arrested Wednesday after a gunman opened fire in the mill's parking lot and continued shooting inside, RCMP said.

The shooting happened shortly before 7 a.m. at a Western Forest Products sawmill in Nanaimo, more than 100 kilometres north of Victoria.

Police arrived within minutes of the first 911 call, RCMP said, and arrested a 47-year-old man from Nanaimo.

Four men were taken to hospital with gunshot wounds, one by air to Victoria and the rest to Nanaimo, where two were pronounced dead.

Few details were released about the victims, the suspect or what may have motivated a workplace shooting that left a normally quiet coastal city of about 84,000 people in shock.

Supt. Mark Fisher said police believed the attack began in the parking lot and then moved into the mill's offices.

Fisher didn't provide any further details about the suspect and declined to speculate about the attack's motivation.

Western Forest Products said the suspect was a former employee, though it wasn't clear when the man left the mill or under what circumstances. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Ford to take a break to deal with his substance abuse

Campaign put on hold. Lawyer for infamous mayor of Toronto says embattled leader knows he 'needs help'

Rob Ford will take a leave of absence from his re-election campaign to seek help for substance abuse, his lawyer said Wednesday as new media reports involving drugs and alcohol emerged.

Dennis Morris said the Toronto mayor "realizes he needs help for substance abuse," but would not specify which substance his client is seeking treatment for or what steps he will take.

"In my eyes, he should announce those steps to the public in the near future," Morris said.

The Toronto Sun, which carried quotes from the mayor about his decision to go get help, reported Ford will nonetheless remain on the ballot for the Oct. 27 mayoral election.

Rob Ford's lawyer says the Toronto mayor will take a leave of absence to seek help for substance abuse. FRANK GUNN/THE CANADIAN PRESS FILE

The announcement came as both the Sun and the Globe and Mail published fresh allegations about the mayor.

The Globe said two of its reporters viewed a new video of Ford smoking what the newspaper said was described as crack cocaine by a self-professed drug dealer. The Globe said the video was secretly filmed in Ford's sister's basement early Saturday morning.

Meanwhile, the Sun reported it obtained an audio recording of the mayor "being unruly as he's ordering booze" and making "lewd comments" about one of his election rivals at a west Toronto bar.

Ford has denied allegations that he is addicted to drugs or alcohol, though he has admitted having used crack cocaine while in a "drunken stupor" during his tenure.

Shortly afterward, city council voted to relieve Ford of many of his mayoral powers.

The mayor also admitted he had been drinking during an incident in which he was filmed using Jamaican swear words and other profanities at a Toronto restaurant.

He vowed last year that he had given up alcohol — part of a campaign to rehabilitate his image in light of his admission. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Sinn Fein leader arrested in 1972 IRA murder case

Police in Northern Ireland arrested Sinn Fein party leader Gerry Adams on Wednesday on suspicion of involvement in the Irish Republican Army's 1972 abduction, killing and secret burial of a Belfast widow.

Adams, 65, confirmed his own arrest in a prepared statement and described it as a voluntary, prearranged interview.

Police long had been expected to question Adams about the 1972 killing of Jean McConville, a 38-year-old mother of 10 whom the IRA executed as an alleged spy.

According to all authoritative histories of the Sinn Fein-IRA movement, Adams served as an IRA commander for decades, but he has always denied holding any position in the outlawed group.

"I believe that the killing of Jean McConville and the secret burial of her body was wrong and a grievous injustice to her and her family," Adams said. "Well publicized, malicious allegations have been made against me. I reject these. While I have never disassociated myself from the IRA and I never will, I am innocent of any part in the abduction, killing or burial of Mrs. McConville."

Reflecting the embarrassment associated with killing a single mother, the IRA did not admit the killing until 1999, and her unmarked grave was discovered only by accident near a Republic of Ireland beach in 2003.

Adams was implicated in the killing by two IRA veterans who gave taped interviews to researchers for a Boston College history archive on the four-decade Northern Ireland conflict. Belfast police took legal steps to acquire the interviews, parts of which already were published after the 2008 death of one IRA interviewee, Brendan Hughes. The researchers fought unsuccessfully to avoid handover of the tapes of the second IRA interviewee, Dolours Price, who died last year.

In his interview, Hughes, a reputed longtime deputy to Adams within the Belfast IRA, said McConville was killed on Adams' orders. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Airstrike hits school in Aleppo, killing at least 19

A Syrian fighter jet struck a school with a missile in the opposition-held part of the northern city of Aleppo Wednesday as teachers and students were preparing an exhibit of children's drawings depicting their country at war, killing at least 19 people, including 10 children, activists said.

Parts of the two-storey Ein Jalout school appeared to have been completely smashed, according to activist videos, which showed blood splatters, twisted metal and children's items, like a little red heart-shaped box. Fire at military warehouse leaves 10 people dead

Russia's Defence Ministry says 10 people have died after a fire broke out at a military warehouse in the Siberian Baikal region.

In a statement published early on Wednesday, the defence ministry said 10 people who were travelling in a truck near the depot when the fire broke out late on Tuesday were found dead. Two of the victims were military personnel while the other eight were civilians who worked at the base.

The ministry said the fire had been extinguished, but provided no information about the cause of the blaze or how the victims died.

Schoolgirls forced to marry their abductors?

Nigeria. About 50 girls managed to escape in the first days after their abduction, but 220 remain missing

Scores of girls and young women kidnapped from a school in Nigeria are being forced to marry their Islamic extremist abductors, a civic organization said Wednesday.

Parents say the girls are being sold into marriage to Boko Haram militants. The students are being paid 2,000 naira (about $12) to marry the fighters, Halite Aliyu of the Borno-Yobe People's Forum said. She said the parents' information about mass weddings is coming from villagers in the Sambisa Forest, on Nigeria's border with Cameroon, where Boko Haram is known to have hideouts.

Outrage over the failure to rescue the girls is growing and hundreds of women braved heavy rain to march Wednesday to Nigeria's National Assembly to protest lack of action over the students. Hundreds more also marched in Kano, Nigeria's second-largest city, in the north. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Tracking the kidnappers

Girls may be across border, senator says

A senator said Nigeria's military is aware of the movements of the kidnappers and the girls because he has been feeding them details he has gathered.

"What bothered me the most is that whenever I informed the military where these girls were, after two to three days they were moved from that place to another. Still, I would go back and inform them on new developments," Sen. Ahmad Zanna told the Nigerian online news site Persecond News.

Zanna said some of the girls are in Kolofata in Cameroon, about 15 kilometres from the border with Nigeria. He said one of the insurgents had called a friend in Borno state to say that he had just got married and was settling in Kolofata. Zanna also said three or four days ago Nigerian herdsmen reported seeing the girls taken in boats onto an island in Lake Chad.

Drug-resistant bacteria pose global threat

Antibiotics. Experts warn that the world could be heading toward a future where minor infections can kill

Bacteria resistant to antibiotics have now spread to every part of the world and might lead to a future where minor infections could kill, according to a report published Wednesday by the World Health Organization.

In its first global survey of the resistance problem, WHO said it found very high rates of drug-resistant E. coli bacteria, which causes problems including meningitis and infections of the skin, blood and the kidneys.

The agency noted there are many countries where treatment for the bug is useless in more than half of patients.

WHO's report also found worrying rates of resistance in other bacteria, including common causes of pneumonia and gonorrhea. Unless there is urgent action, "the world is headed for a post-antibiotic era in which common infections and minor injuries which have been treatable for decades can once again kill," Dr. Keiji Fukuda, one of the agency's assistant director-generals, warned.

WHO said it couldn't assess the validity of the data provided and that many countries had no information on antibiotic resistance.

WHO said people should use antibiotics only when prescribed by a doctor, that they should complete the full prescription and never share antibiotics with others, or use leftover antibiotics.

Goodbye, Earth ...

Pioneers. A one-way ticket to Mars means the hopefuls will have to bid goodbye to their planet and loved ones

JEREMY NOLAIS
Metro in Calgary

In all likelihood, the first tickets to the Red Planet won't come with the guarantee of a return trip.

For those on the maiden Mars voyage, it could mean goodbye forever to loved ones and the comforts of home.

"Wait, wait — there's not a Starbucks on Mars?" questioned prospective astronaut Tyler Reyno, his tongue planted firmly in cheek.

Laughs aside, Reyno, who hails from Lower Sackville, N.S., admits his quest to propel the human race towards an interplanetary lifestyle would come with some major sacrifices.

But the 21-year-old remains determined to land a spot among the final 1,000 candidates to be a part of the Mars One mission, which is being steered by a deep-pocketed entrepreneur and has a goal of settling on the planet's surface in the year 2023.

Reyno is also in the early stages of launching a Canadian rocket company — Open Space — and has attracted hundreds of followers on social media to his Send Nova Scotia to Space campaign.

"It's a life of purpose in place of a life of comfort," he said. "I find it strangely alluring where every second is a second of survival and challenge and testing. Space exploration is probably just the greatest thing I could ever accomplish."

Calgary engineer Zac Trolley also counts himself among those on the Mars One shortlist and already appears to be on a mission of sorts, one that may prove just as important as one day strapping himself into a skyscraper-sized rocket bound for a new world.

Since learning of his Mars finalist status, he's embarked on a speaking tour, discussing the potential of inter-planetary settlement with working peers, more than 20 elementary-school classes and "whoever else will listen."

Trolley anticipates society being on the verge of a new-age space race, where entrepreneurs with deep pockets will let their imaginations — and their money — run wild.

But he fears there's a lack of Christopher Columbus-eque spirit among many he meets. Save for a few adventurous cavers and deep-sea divers, Trolley said most people are content with going about their day-to-day lives with little care for what may lurk in the dark abyss of the solar system.

"I've had people say 'How dare you? You shouldn't do that,'" he said. "(It's) fear. People are scared of what they don't understand.

"We always have to push boundaries," he continued. "We would have never left the caves and our small villages if people didn't wonder what was over the next hills. And I'm sure, back then, there were people saying, 'No, don't go over those hills — there be dragons.'"

Trolley's parents are worldly explorers themselves. As such, father Gary Trolley said he understands his son's desire to literally go where no man has gone before.

"It will be, in many ways, a sad day to say goodbye," he said.

"He keeps telling us he will be able to communicate with us, but it's not the same thing.

"We try to instil in our children: find a dream, find a passion and go for it — Zachary's chosen a big one," Gary added.

Zac said some have asked if he'll plan his own funeral before embarking to Mars.

"It's such rubbish," he said. "If I was cut off, my friends and family would know that I was doing what I loved doing — doing what I was meant to do. Could you wish anything better on someone than that?"

A world to gain
"People say, 'Why would you leave everything on Earth behind?' I tell them, 'Because I'm getting an entire planet.'"

MARS
CHRIS HADFIELD

Calgary engineer Zac Trolley admits he has many comforts readily available both inside and near his bachelor pad, but said he's always dreamed of doing something more with his life. He's among those hoping to secure a ride to Mars or an asteroid as a new-age space race appears primed to ignite. JEREMY NOLAIS/METRO IN CALGARY

... Hello,

A human expedition to Mars is proposed within the next 15 years. Metro takes you on an exploratory trip to find out just why life on the Red Planet is so alluring, and what awaits us in the future.

Calgary artist Bryan Versteeg started working on the Martian space habitat after he was approached by the founders of the

Keeping astronauts

Just because there's zero gravity doesn't mean you can skip the gym.

In fact, the Canadian Space Agency (CSA) recommends its orbiting astronauts work out for two hours each and every day they spend aboard the International Space Station. Squats, treadmill runs, the daunting bench press, you name it — exercising is seen as pivotal to helping combat the loss of muscle mass and bone density that plagues astronauts who no longer require anything to support their weight.

Then comes food, and Natalie Hirsch, project officer in the CSA's life sciences and space medicine division, is quick to point to a potential struggle with keeping astronauts fed for the duration of their jaunt to Mars and the subsequent time it takes up to, say, start farming, once there.

Estimates have suggested the journey to the Red Planet will take seven months alone and the "thermo-stabilized" foods stored aboard ISS only keep for about a year.

Fresh fruits and vegetables go bad after a week — making it a real treat for astronauts every time a new shuttle packed with a cart full of apples docks at ISS.

Then there's the potential for picky eaters.

Hirsch said there are anecdotal reports of astronauts' dietary preferences changing once they leave the planet, although no formal study has been done to determine why.

"We do have people saying 'I love spinach' on the ground and when they get into space the same spinach they tested pre-flight is just not as tasty," she said.

fed and fit is no picnic

How not to let yourself go ... in space

To get a sense of what exercise gear could go with astronauts on their mission to Mars, here's the equipment used aboard the International Space Station:

- The cycle ergometer: Works similarly to a stationary bike and comes complete with a back-support plank and hand holds to keep the astronaut on the machine.
- The treadmill: Unlike your run-of-the-mill basement device, the ISS treadmill features a bungee and harness contraption to tie the astronaut down. The bungees are then set to put a load on the astronaut that is progressively increased throughout the mission, making their space run more difficult.
- The ARED: This device mimics weightlifting on Earth by utilizing vacuum cylinders that can be adjusted to create up to 600 pounds acting against astronauts performing squats, dead lifts, and so on.

Jeff Fortuna is testing a treadmill developed at NASA to simulate weightless exercise that can be used to keep astronauts in shape. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS FILE

A day in the life of a space settler

A general view of a "Space Toilet" is seen in a "Space Habitation Module" at Miraïkan, The Emerging Museum of Science and Innovation, in Tokyo, Japan. GETTY IMAGES

And you thought you had bathroom issues

The toilet aboard the International Space Station relies on airflow instead of gravity to contain excrement. Urine is mixed with other wastewater, purified, and then returned to the drinking water supply. Solid material, meanwhile, is gathered, exposed to the harsh climate of space to destroy bacteria — and the associated smell — and then eventually jettisoned into space when a large enough amount has been gathered.

Astronauts don't cry ... no, really

There's no crying in space. Because of the zero gravity atmosphere, space explorers' tears don't fall; they just form water bubbles and stay there until removed.

Wow, you really need a (sponge) bath!

Sponge baths, not showers, are generally the best method to exercise personal hygiene aboard a space shuttle or station.

Hey, old chap. Got the time?

Canadian astronauts in space and those manning the mission back on Earth generally follow Greenwich mean time, meaning they keep the same hours as your average chap living in London, England.

In North America, the rich get richer and the poor get poorer Inequality.

While the top 1% in Canada and the U.S. line their pockets, the 99% make do with less

Canada is among the worst in the developed world in terms of the widening income gap, according to a new OECD paper.

The analysis shows income inequality has grown in most advanced economies represented in the Organization for Economic Co-operation and Development over the past three decades, but the United States and Canada are near the top in terms of growth and in absolute terms.

The OECD says the top one per cent of Canadian pre-tax income earners captured 37 per cent of the overall income growth between 1981 and 2012, and now account for 12.2 per cent of the country's total annual income.

In the United States, the top one percenters captured 47 per cent of the total income growth in the country during the period — and now share one-fifth of the country's pre-tax income.

Meanwhile, incomes among the poorest households have not kept pace with overall income growth, the OECD says, and in fact stripping away the top one percenters would leave overall income growth considerably lower in many countries.

This is why the majority of the population can't reconcile their countries' economic growth rate with improvements in their incomes, the OECD report speculates.

The OECD data shows income disparities, while growing in most of the 34 economies it tracks, varies greatly from country to country, with little correlation as to the economic performance during the period. THE CANADIAN PRESS

THE DIFFERENCES ARE STILL CUTE

HE SAYS

John Mazerolle
metronews.ca

My relationship with my girlfriend still has that new-courtship smell, so we find our differences fun and enjoyable.

For instance, she recently said, "Do you want to see the new shoes I bought?" and I said, "Yes."

I know.

Society rightfully finds these attempts to take an interest in each other disgusting, but we don't care because we're surrounded by The Forcefield of Love, which filters out negative thoughts and nauseated glances.

That said, I didn't realize the huge gulf between us until she sent herself packing.

No, she didn't leave me. She moved to a new apartment.

And, let me tell you, she moves like Jagger, assuming Mick has an ace moving company and excellent organizational skills.

My girlfriend was moved into her apartment with Internet hooked up, everything unpacked, and a new bed made in both senses, all by mid-afternoon. Compare that to me, who took two months to get Internet, four years to unpack (there's been little call for kitchen utensils, less for oven cleaner) and a bed that isn't made in either sense thanks to unconstructed Ikea drawers. Our approaches to apartment moving and living are very different, but in the spirit of these effortless early days, I can see the value in both. Observe:

Planning, her way: She moves from room to room, planning which items will go in which boxes. Advantage: She is in full control of the move. Planning, my way: I move from room to room, planning which items will go into which boxes until the night before when I look up from the couch and say, "Oh right, the kitchen!" Advantage: I work better with a deadline.

Packing, her way: She followed the Bush Doctrine and had her old apartment pre-emptively packed before her belongings expected anything. We walked among the stacks of boxes for a couple of weeks like we were in the last shot of Raiders of the Lost Ark. Advantage: Unpacking was easy thanks to her fastidiousness. She knew which box Schrödinger's cat was in, and whether it was alive or dead. Packing, my way: I skipped over the boxes during my last move by choosing an apartment in the same neighbourhood and throwing my stuff at random into a wheelbarrow. Advantage: This was quick, easy and allowed me to say that I have used a wheelbarrow.

Insects, her way: Her tolerance for bugs is low, but if they were in her apartment, she would remove them by neatly stacking them in a clearly labelled box reading, "Hexapoda." Advantage: Cleanliness is good in an apartment, I've heard. Insects, my way: When I came back from a European vacation and discovered that a creepy crawler had joined me in bed and chewed on me throughout the night, I decided I would simply not go into the bedroom for several months in hopes of starving it out. Advantage: It worked.

So there are upsides to both my girlfriend's approach to life and mine. Hopefully, she feels the same way and will never send me packing. If she does, I'll have to borrow a wheelbarrow.

Suburbia's crop circles

A "master planned community" in Maricopa County, Ariz. CHRISTOPH GIELEN/CIPHERS

Q&A

"We need to decipher them"

CHRISTOPH GIELEN
Artist/photographer, 46, based in New York

In his book Ciphers, photographer Christoph Gielen helps us grasp the impact our households have on the landscape with his aerial shots of suburbia's unusual shapes. Here's what he had to say about his work:

What inspired you to do this project? I wanted to do something that would be compelling and grab people's attention. Back in 2003, I was doing some aerial photography of controlled implosions in Scotland when I got the idea for the urban-sprawl project — to photograph different suburban developments across the U.S., from Nevada to Florida, from an airplane.

What did you see up there? The most unusual patterns imaginable. I could make out different floral shapes and designs that resembled a spider's web. But what I captured are places that are totally unsustainable.

So you're pointing to some social message? Yes, I want to trigger a discussion. We are all worried about the environment and climate change, and I wanted to place this concept of car-centric urban sprawl at the heart of the debate.

They look like concrete crop circles to me. It's very ironic that many of these patterns are floral or organic-looking, but there is very little sustainable or environmental about these developments. METRO

Hamster gets served tiny labour of love

ANDREW FIFIELD

Burritos tend not to be the most delicate of foods, what with the overflowing contents breaking through the wrap to leave an incriminating trail down your hands.

Since most of us don't have the skilled hands of a surgeon, that's the role burritos are destined to play in our lives. This guy, however — this guy is capable of truly trim and tidy burritos. Why do that, you ask? To feed them to hamsters, of course!

Former filmmaker lives out his musical dreams

BESTiE. 'I kind of left television and film to pursue my first true love of music,' says frontman Tristan Orchard

Many people would consider becoming a success in the fields of film and television the realization of a lifelong dream. For BESTiE frontman Tristan Orchard, those vocations were mere stepping stones to what he really wanted to do with his life.

"I kind of left television and film to pursue my first true love of music," Orchard said in a telephone interview. "For me personally, I just need to create and I love the energy of playing music, it's just really addictive."

The multitalented Orchard, who is a Gemini-nominated filmmaker, describes the formation of BESTiE as organic, coming together two years ago when he was running a jam space in Vancouver.

"We were having a jam one hot, sweaty summer evening and kind of got in there and started playing, and the combination of sounds made something we really thought was unique. We started working on songs and it just got to the point where we decided to keep pursuing it."

The group released a pair of well-received singles last year and began attracting attention, including from producer Howard Redekopp, who has recorded groups like Tegan and Sara and The New Pornographers. He agreed to produce their EP No Bad Days.

"We kind of made a list of people we wanted to work with and Howard was at the top, he was the dream. He and his manager liked our demos, which was amazing, so we got together and hung out and went from there."

No Bad Days was released on April 22, with a sound that Orchard describes as "summery," reflecting the warmer weather that the band will hopefully experience as they head out on tour through the end of the month.

"It's really exciting to have some music to unleash on people, and hopefully people love it. We've had some great response to it already and we're super-excited to go on tour and meet new fans and bring it to people."

Their May 3 show in Saskatoon at Vangelis will continue their trend of breaking new ground. Although they are fresh off of trips to South by Southwest in Austin and a detour to Colombia (see sidebar) this show will represent their farthest journey as a band in their native land.

"We've previously only gone as far (east) as Alberta and back for a tour, it's a personal bucket list life goal to make that cross-Canada drive to see this great country. As a band, and maybe even as a Canadian, it's something you've got to do."

A flair for film

Although he has transitioned to life as a musician, Tristan Orchard's skills as a filmmaker haven't gone to rust. He has directed videos for BESTiE including one for the single Sriracha shot in Colombia, which allowed drummer Daniel Ruiz to visit his homeland.

- "I've done music videos for other bands, but to be able to do it for your own music is pretty fun because you have that original, deep connection to the music," Orchard said.

New Kids on the Boat: Nineties group hits the high seas for reality show

Whoever thought up this reality show should get the Nobel Prize. It combines everyone's two favourite things: '90s nostalgia and the high seas. New Kids on the Block, the original '90s boy band, are reuniting for a reality show on a boat. Cable network TVGN is developing Rock This Boat, a show about the reunited NKOTB setting sail with die-hard fans for a week of partying. Sounds like a thin premise for a show, but I assume they will also be fighting pirates, exploring uncharted waters and searching for buried treasure. That's what people on boats do, right? Rock This Boat will air next season. It will be executive produced by Donnie Wahlberg, NKOTB member and brother of Mark Wahlberg. The latter is probably jealous that his career is thriving sufficiently that he does not get to go on a boat to revive it.

Wanna marry Prince Harry? The royal is single again

MELINDA TAUB
Metro World News

Did you know there's a reality show called I Wanna Marry "Harry"? It's a Joe Millionaire-type deal, where a bunch of women compete for the affections of a random ginger Englishman they've been told is Prince Harry. It's incredibly mean, but those contestants may have the last laugh: Harry is, in fact, single again, and available for marrying. I hope one of them snags him.

Prince Harry, the fun-loving royal currently fourth in line for the English throne, has reportedly split from his girlfriend Cressida Bonas, according to the Daily Mirror. The move comes as a surprise: Earlier this year, the two were said to be getting serious and many royal-watchers expected them to get engaged.

Renée Zellweger

Did Demi give Renée her plastic surgeon's digits?

Renée Zellweger is reportedly worrying herself senseless about mounting a career comeback — and has turned to Demi Moore for help as a life coach, according to Star magazine. "Unless she pulls herself together, Renee's acting future looks very uncertain. Renee is in therapy dealing with her anxiety about appearing on camera again after a string of embarrassing movie flops," a source says. And reactions to the Bridget Jones Diary star's recent rare public appearance certainly aren't helping matters. "The mixed reaction to her transformation has unnerved Renée in a big way," the source says. "Pals are convinced it was Demi who gave her her plastic surgeon's number, thinking it would give her a confidence boost." That plan, it seems, has backfired.

High-tech, high style. Amazon opens up shop to consumers who want wearables that work for them

Just as it did for the smart home, the online retailer has launched a storefront dedicated to wearable technology devices.

Focused as much on educating consumers as on selling products to them, The Amazon Wearable Technology portal has gone live as part of its U.S. site.

It organizes devices across five categories: fitness and wellness; healthcare devices; wearable cameras; smart watches; and family, kids and pets; but it also features buying guides, a video library of tutorials, featured or spotlight products and an editor's corner blog.

In September, Amazon launched a dedicated web portal for home automation and smart home products along the same lines, aiming to demystify the technology and help consumers to make informed decisions about the products that best suit their needs and their lifestyles.

There's little doubt that the buzz around wearable tech devices is building and building, but so far that buzz doesn't appear to have translated into huge consumer demand.

With the exception of fitness trackers, the latest crop of smart watches has failed to generate much in the way of sales. Juniper Research estimates that 15 million wearable health and fitness devices were sold in 2013 and believes that by 2018, that number could be as high as 100 million.

Canadian superfoods! Julie Daniluk has you covered from coast-to-coast

Barney and the Purple People Eater would surely approve

Hempy Purple Coleslaw. Not only does this dish have the same awesome hue as some memorable characters, it's also delicious and nutritious

"The zip in this recipe is from the tangy sour flavour of the sauerkraut," writes Julie Daniluk in Slimming Meals that Heal. "Look for unpasteurized sauerkraut in your local health food store, as the natural process of fermentation creates beneficial probiotic bacteria.

"I love Ambrosia apples because they are slow to brown when cut and are ideal for salads. Nutty hemp hearts offer the healing benefits of magnesium and omega-3 fatty acids."

Ingredients

Salad
- 1 cup unpasteurized sauerkraut, drained
- 4 cups finely shredded purple cabbage
- 1/2 cup finely sliced red onion
- 2 organic apples, unpeeled, cored and thinly sliced
- 2 tbsp hemp hearts

Dressing
- 2 tbsp hemp oil
- 2 tbsp sauerkraut liquid
- 1 tsp dried dill weed
- Raw honey, to taste
- 2 tsp pink rock salt or grey sea salt

FLASH FOOD
From your fridge to your table in 30 minutes or less

1. Drain sauerkraut and reserve liquid. Mix together salad ingredients.

2. In a separate bowl, whisk dressing ingredients together.

3. Add dressing to salad and combine until salad is evenly coated.

How to live large in a small space

Design advice. These timeless tips can make any small space look roomy and spacious

DESIGN CENTRE
Karl Lohnes
home@metronews.ca

New homes are getting smaller and smaller, so adhering to a few good design rules can help you live just a little bit larger.

I can't imagine better advice to dispense to anyone who's moving, renovating or sprucing up their place than these golden rules of small-space decorating. They're timeless and hold true for any space you might live in. Here are my top four rules:

Quoted

"To bring light into a long, narrow space, stand a floor mirror 90 degrees to a window."
Karl Lohnes, decor expert and columnist

Tones and colour

- Keep tones of flooring, walls and furnishings similar so the eye roams without interruption between light and dark shades.
- Cooler versions of a colour (every colour has a warm and cool side) tend to reflect more light, therefore making a small space feel larger.
- When the width of the ceiling is smaller than the height of the wall (as in most small condo lofts), then paint the ceiling the same colour as walls; it will make the room appear wider.

Use of mirrors

- You may have heard that mirrors can visually expand a space. The secret is to use them to widen, not lengthen, a room, so always hang a mirror on the long wall, not the short one.
- To bring light into a long, narrow space, stand a floor mirror 90 degrees to a window; it will reflect the window and direct the incoming light deep into the space.
- Never be afraid to stand a side table, chair or plant in front of a large mirror to add drama and depth, especially in foyers and bedrooms.

Scale of furnishings

- There is an art to creating the illusion of large-scale furnishings in a small space. Try incorporating large-scale items that don't take up much floor space — art, console tables, footstools, area rugs and curtains are all perfect contenders since they don't fill a room with their volume.
- The 2/3 proportion is your best friend when layering items in a room. The coffee table should be 2/3 the width of the sofa, the sofa should be 2/3 the width of the rug, and the art should be 2/3 the width of the sofa.

The need for storage

- Storage is a practical need when decorating a small space. Try to incorporate it into every element of your space. Add an extra shelf one foot above floor level in a closet — this will offer up another row of shoe storage. And another shelf at the very top of your closet is great for storing out-of-season clothing.
- Look for furniture that incorporates storage, folds down or offers double-duty to offer flexible alternatives in a smaller space.

Creating a monochromatic colour scheme allows the eye to travel without interruption. A floor mirror helps reflect another window into the room. Oversized Leaning Floor Mirror, $1,100, potterybarn.com

One makes a footrest, two make a bench in the foyer or at the end of a bed. A classic style icon that fits a modern or traditional interior. Hudson's Bay Company Point Blanket Ottoman, $395, thebay.com

Wall-hung shelving and containers help to keep vanity areas organized. Although made for herb gardens, this plant container system is perfect for brushes and other beauty accessories. SOCKER plant pot with holder, $29.99, ikea.ca

Toronto ready to Rap it up in Brooklyn

NBA playoffs. Lowry pours in 36 points as Raptors pin Nets against the ropes

Game 5

Raptors	Nets
115	113

Kyle Lowry poured in 36 points to lift Toronto to a nailbiting 115-113 victory over the Brooklyn Nets on Wednesday, giving the Raptors a 3-2 lead in their best-of-seven playoff series.

DeMar DeRozan added 23 points, while Jonas Valanciunas finished with 16, and Greivis Vasquez added 15.

Amir Johnson chipped in with 11 points for the Raptors who gave up a 26-point lead in the fourth quarter, making for some tense moments at the Air Canada Centre, but held on for the victory.

Joe Johnson led the Nets with 30 points.

The series heads back to Brooklyn's Barclays Center for Game 6 on Friday.

The Raptors controlled the game through second and third quarters where it seemed they could do no wrong, and led by 26 points twice late in the third.

They headed into the fourth up 91-69 advantage and appeared poised to cruise to an easy victory, but the Nets had plenty of fight left in them, tying the game at 101-101 on a three-pointer by Johnson with 3:16 to go and stunning the crowd.

Vasquez and Mirza Teletovic traded threes and it was tied with 1:23 to go before Lowry drained a three and then scored on a driving hook shot to put Toronto up by three with 27 seconds left.

Two DeRozan free throws put Toronto up by five, but Alan Anderson was fouled on a three to pull the Nets to within a point with 10 seconds to play. DeRozan and Blatche traded free throws then Blatche chucked a wayward ball meant for Deron Williams that was ruled a backcourt violation, sealing the victory.

No longer NHL's best-kept secret

Patrice Bergeron started earning acclaim for his defensive game four seasons ago when he was a legitimate Selke Trophy candidate for the first time.

It has taken longer for Bergeron to be appreciated as one of the best all-around players in the NHL. Maybe it started during the Boston Bruins' 2011 Stanley Cup run or last year's trip to the final, but after playing a major role in Team Canada's gold-medal performance at the Sochi Olympics, the 28-year-old is surely considered among hockey's elite centres.

"I think what he's done is he opened a lot of people's eyes," Boston coach Claude Julien said. "I know at his first Olympics he didn't have ... to do what he did. The last one I think people realized how good he is."

Rivals meet again

The Canadiens and Bruins will face each other in the post-season for a record 34th time when their NHL Eastern Conference semifinal opens Thursday night in Boston.

Statistically, Bergeron had just two assists in six games, but the Quebec City native shifted from a fourth-line centre role to right-wing alongside Sidney Crosby and never missed a beat. His nearly flawless play wasn't a revelation as much as it underscored his growth from the 2010 Games in Vancouver, where he was the 13th forward.

This season, Bergeron was downright dominant at times with 62 points in 80 games, a league-best plus-38 rating and a 58.6 per cent success rate in the faceoff circle. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Horoscopes

♈ Aries
March 21 - April 20
You have taken on a lot of new tasks in recent weeks and could probably do with some help. Others will come to your assistance and share the load if you ask them but you must make it worth their while.

♉ Taurus
April 21 - May 21
Make sure you know what is expected of you before backing a plan that will take up a lot of your time and energy. And make sure there's a timetable.

♊ Gemini
May 22 - June 21
If others want to make an issue of things that are of no significance to you then you have no choice but to turn your back and walk away.

♋ Cancer
June 22 - July 23
There is a danger that you will try to make the facts fit your assumptions — and if you do the consequences could be dire. Always strive to see life as it is, not as you wish it might be. Then and only then can you make a difference.

♌ Leo
July 24 - Aug. 23
If your ultimate goal is as far away as ever, perhaps you should take it as a sign that something is wrong. It's not too late to change course — only your ego is holding you back.

♍ Virgo
Aug. 24 - Sept. 23
The planets are very much in your favour at the moment and no doubt you fear nothing, but you still need to be careful. Don't push your luck and don't push yourself beyond your natural limits, no matter what the potential rewards might be.

♎ Libra
Sept. 24 - Oct. 23
Mars in your sign endows you with courage but other aspects warn you can't do it all on your own. You need to rediscover the joy of how good it feels to share success with others.

♏ Scorpio
Oct. 24 - Nov. 22
You have never been one for small talk and what others are wittering on about no doubt bores you to tears. Ignore them and focus your attention on what is important to you, even if no one else seems to agree.

♐ Sagittarius
Nov. 23 - Dec. 21
Try to say only nice things about friends and colleagues, because if you make your true feelings known it will cause you all sorts of problems. That really applies on the work front.

♑ Capricorn
Dec. 22 - Jan. 20
For some reason you seem reluctant to take advantage of an opportunity most people would give their right arm for. Yes, it could go wrong but it could also go stunningly right. Unless you try, you won't know.

♒ Aquarius
Jan. 21 - Feb. 19
You think that your feelings for a certain person are a one-way street but that is far from the truth. They care as much for you as you do for them but, for now at least, they've got other things to worry about.

♓ Pisces
Feb. 20 - March 20
You will discover something about a friend or loved one that surprises you today. Resist the urge to pry any deeper — leave them a few secrets to enjoy. SALLY BROMPTON
